Paris, France – June 26th, 2008 - Intertek, the leading global provider of certification, Corporate Social Responsibility, quality and safety services to a wide range of global and local industries, today announced that OpenSRI has launched the first collaborative web platform on Socially Responsible Investments (SRI) and Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) at www.opensri.com.

The objective is to create an innovative and interactive tool that will foster dialogue on CSR issues between companies and their stakeholders.

The vibrant global conversations happening on the blogosphere have triggered a new generation of collaborative websites. The very nature of collaboration of these websites allows users to pool resources together and freely exchange information. OpenSRI will enable industry watchdogs, non profits, shareholders and stakeholders to share information on best and worst practices in the sustainability arena.

Everybody will be able to participate. The web platform will be accessible free of charge for stakeholders. It will also allow technical and non-technical users alike to freely post comments on listed companies with the assurance that the highest standards will be upheld by the community and experts participating.
