Why you need the Mark

Join the leading companies in Ireland and achieve the Business Working Responsibly mark to gain a competitive advantage

Customers want to trust organisations they engage with. Employees, especially millennials, want to work for values-driven employers and investors want to know that a company is addressing its sustainability risks.

Through initiatives such as the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals, governments and other coalitions are rallying the power of business behind some of the world's biggest environmental and social crises.

The Business Working Responsibly mark, based on ISO 26000 and audited by the National Standards Authority of Ireland (NSAI), will assess your responsible and sustainable business practices.

It will provide your organisation with an assessment of how well positioned it is to address risks and opportunities in the current business environment. The assessment looks at how your organisation has integrated responsible and sustainable practices into its management of:

- ✔ Employee Engagement
- ✔ Value Chain Processes
- ✔ Environmental Practices
- ✔ Community Engagement

Achieving the Mark involves passing a self-assessment questionnaire and completing a verification audit conducted by the NSAI.

The outcome is documented in an audit report and in a benchmark report against a cohort of peers.

Achieving the Mark recognises your organisation's management of responsible and sustainable practices and along the way, the Mark will also provide you with an inventory, a gap analysis and a roadmap for your sustainable journey.

It showcases your organisation as best in class.

In addition to the external endorsement, organisations cite the benefits of the process itself which brings disparate parts of the organisation together in one cohesive planning framework.

Certification to the Mark through audit will:

- Enhance your employer brand and help attract and retain employees
- Provide a management tool to assess a range of the organisation's operational risks and opportunities worldwide
- Deliver a detailed assessment of gaps and a road-map of opportunities
- Allow the organisation to benchmark its practices and performance amongst peers
- Provide independent verification by the National Standards Authority of Ireland (NSAI)
- Provide corporate responsibility and sustainability credentials that can be used in contracting processes and government tenders where key social and environmental criteria are used to select preferred bidders

- Support the organisation in leveraging investment potential as more and more investment houses and indices (e.g. Dow Jones Sustainability Index and FTSE4Good) want evidence of good corporate practices
- Improve awareness of your brand and reputation internally and externally as the Mark can be used in marketing and promotional materials
- Enhance your profile as we announce organisations that have achieved the Mark and we include them in our high level CEO events annually
